WELL-FED CHICAGOANS HEAR SOME HOT SHOTS FIRED BY WALSH

Chairman of Industrial Relations Commission Rips Into Low Wage Payers and Charity Workers Before City Club Members—Names Classes Guilty of Economic Abuses

Not since the days of John P. Altgeld has an audience of well-fed Chicago people listened to such fierce accusations as those of Frank P. Walsh, chairman U. S. industrial relations commission, at the City club luncheon this noon. He hit principally at low wages of big employers and at the charity workers. Here are the hot shots of his speech:

"I hold that every organization we have for good should strike a blow at the main offender: Low wages and the resultant indecent standard of living for a thinking and a toiling race!

"I agree with Henry Ford that the sane and well-nurtured person is instinctively good and primarily honest.

"Men guilty of economic abuses for gain may be divided into these classes: Those who, by corruption, secure franchises and other special privileges to exploit entire communities; the men who, by similar methods, secure a grip on land and other natural resources, to selfishly exploit the same or hold it away from the use of
